

Dr. Deborah A. Boehm-Davis
George Mason University

EDUCATION

University of California, Berkeley
Ph.D., Cognitive Psychology, 1980
M.A., Cognitive Psychology, 1977
Douglass College, Rutgers – The State University
A.B., Psychology, 1975

WORK EXPERIENCE

George Mason University
Professor, Department of Psychology, 1996 - Present
Associate Professor, 1990 - 1996
Assistant Professor, 1984 - 1990
Vice Provost for Research & Graduate Studies, 1996 - 1997
Associate Provost for Research & Graduate Studies, 1994 - 1996
Assistant Provost for Research & Graduate Studies, 1993 - 1994
Assistant Dean, Graduate School, 1992 - 1993
General Electric Company
Research Psychologist, 1981 - 1984
NASA-Ames Research Center
Research Psychologist, 1980 - 1981

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

Information display, cognitive modeling, how interface design can create cognitive workload, the role of cognition in driving and piloting performance, comprehension and maintenance of software and data bases.

PROFESSIONAL/SCIENTIFIC/HONORARY AFFILIATIONS

Award for Scientific Achievement in the Behavioral & Social Sciences, Washington Academy of Sciences; Franklin Taylor Award, IEEE Systems, Man, and Cybernetics Society; Franklin V. Taylor Lifetime Achievement Award, American Psychological Association (Division 21); Fellow, American Psychological Association, Human Factors & Ergonomics Society; President & Secretary-Treasurer, Human Factors and Ergonomics Society; President, Applied Experimental and Engineering Psychology (Division 21), American Psychological Association; Member, Washington Academy of Sciences & the Douglass Society.